Code Club comes to Narellan Library

Children can learn about computer coding as part of a new program to be run from Narellan Library in the school term.

Code Club will be held after school, giving students the opportunity to create and code simple programs and games.

Children aged 9 years to 14 years can invent, imagine, create and collaborate as part of this weekly technology club.

Classes will be held 4pm-5pm each Monday, from 12 February during the school term.

Registration opens Monday 22 January and can be made online through the Camden libraries website, www.library.camden.nsw.gov.au.
